'Operation Wake Up' concludes 4.5-month undercover effort

By DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Sheriff's Department and other law enforcement agencies concluded a four-and-a-half-month-long drug investigation Friday with more than 30 arrests.

Hancock drug bust nets 39

"Operation Wake Up" Friday began with the first arrest at 1:30 a.m. and continued for most of the day, ending in the arrest of 38 Hancock County residents.

The investigation itself began Feb. 1, when two undercover agents from St. Tammany Parish, La., came into the area at Sheriff Ronald Peterson's request and began buying drugs off the street or in bars and lounges. Mostly marijuana was involved, although the officers also purchased some cocaine and valium.

County. Those people will be arrested later if possible.

All 38 subjects of those arrested are free on bond. One individual was not allowed to make bond because he is an alleged parole violator, the sheriff said.

In addition to slowing the drug traffic in Hancock County, the arrests may help alleviate a problem with interstate drug traffic over the Hancock County-Louisiana borders, the sheriff said.

Peterson said arrest warrants involved 43 people in 78 charges, but a few of those named were not picked up Friday because they were not in Hancock

Chemical fire closes streets, city complex

By DENA BISNETTE

A chemical fire Friday forced the evacuations of the Bay St. Louis Police Department, Civil Defense office, senior citizens' center and other offices in the same complex.

The fire occurred Friday morning in a section of a warehouse in the complex being used to store sewage cleaning chemicals, according to Mayor Larry Bennett.

Fire Chief Andrew Lizzana said the fire started when a lie-based chemical came into contact with water dripping through a leak in the warehouse roof.

The chemical, which has been used in training the Bay St. Louis Fire Department to fight chemical fires, burns when wet and can give off poisonous fumes if it gets hot enough, Lizzana said.

Parts of Old Spanish Trail, Union Street, Sycamore Street and St. Francis Street were blocked off for about 15 minutes to keep people away from the smoke.

However, Mayor Bennett said people tried to go around or through the roadblocks until backhoes were parked across the streets to prevent access.

Lizzana said the fire was isolated and was extinguished with chemical foam. Two thousand gallons of water caused burns that were treated at the scene and the smoke damaged the warehouse slightly, but no other problems resulted.

Lizzana said the situation could have become worse if some PVC pipe stored in the area or additional chemicals including chlorine and weed killers had ignited.

Authorities were ready to evacuate a nearby housing development if that problem had occurred and had buses standing by for its residents until the fire was over.

Hancock Day at World's Fair slated in August

Reservations are not being accepted for interested citizens to attend the "Salute to Hancock County" day at the 1984 Louisiana World's Fair Monday, August 20.

The Louisiana World's Fair is located in New Orleans, Mississippi, Pavilion on the New Orleans Fair site and will include a 40-minute opening ceremony, showcasing Hancock County for all those visiting the state pavilion.

A package deal costing $30 has been developed by the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce to include transportation by Greyhound bus, fair entrance ticket and a buffer promoting Hancock County.

Those persons who already have season passes to the fair or who already have their entrance ticket will have to pay $17, which will include transportation and the bus.

Interested persons should make advance prepaid reservations by calling the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce at 467-9051 or the tourism office in the Chamber Office on US 90 in Bay St. Louis.

Sheriff pleads for relief from jail overcrowding

By DENA BISNETTE

Hancock County Sheriff Ronnie Peterson issued an urgent appeal to the board of supervisors Thursday for immediate relief from overcrowding at the county jail.

Peterson gave a status report on current conditions in the jail which now houses about 30 prisoners.

"In three weeks we've got a month-long court term, and I don't know where we're going to be. We can't just keep stacking them in," he said.

The sheriff said most of the prisoners he considered safe for release have already been freed on bond. The remaining prisoners include several accused of murder, armed robbery or other violent crimes and a convicted murderer appealing a case.

"I don't want to let anybody out who should stay in," Peterson told the board.

The sheriff also told the board he has been forced to allow many people who have been recently arrested to remain free on bond, sometimes by lowering the amount until the arrested individual can pay.

"This is costing us in the time of people arrested for third offense DUI and requiring by law to serve a jail term can be brutal," Peterson explained.

The sheriff suggested keeping his minimum security prisoners in a separate building from the jail, but board members agreed that anyone's safe education and welfare is more important than the facility's ability to trailer could probably be released.

The possibility of closing one of the lower security units in the jail, the Hancock County Sheriff's Office, was discussed.

However, the sheriff said the jail was designed to hold 30 people and is currently holding 40.

He said the jail is at 100 percent capacity and the sheriff's office is at 100 percent capacity.

proved last month, but the board discovered some opposition to its establishment.

Citizens who oppose the sanctuary will be able to present their reasons at a public hearing. A date for the hearing will be set when a description of the proposed sanctuary boundaries is available.

The board also heard from two groups concerned about misuse of local waterways. The Shoreline Park Civic Association would like to have speed limits placed on local canals and a group of Diamondhead citizens are interested in keeping boaters from creating high wakes in several areas.

The supervisors said they would look into the problem before taking any action.

In other business, the supervisors discussed the clearing of a lot in a Jordan River subdivision, accepted a resolution officially dedicating the American Legion Post 139 Inc. Veterans Memorial Public Pier as a memorial and took bids for a new tractor under advisement.

Former Hancock clerk files for bankruptcy

Former Hancock County Circuit Clerk Henry Orls has filed a petition for bankruptcy in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Biloxi.

The petition was filed under Chapter 13 of the federal bankruptcy laws and seeks release from a list of debts submitted.

The petition differs from a Chapter 11 case in which petitioners ask to be allowed to arrange a repayment schedule of portions of their debts.

Pro-Life Rally set Tuesday

Included in Orls' list of debts is $57,225, the amount of a civil suit filed against him last month by Attorney General Ed Pittman.

In November 1982 Orls pled guilty in Circuit Court to a misdemeanor charge of failure to render the duties of office by not keeping proper records. He had originally been charged with fraud, a felony.

Orls received a six-month suspended sentence with a year's probation, was ordered to resign from office and to pay restitution of $22,000 to Hancock County for damages to the office between October 1981 and October 1982.

He was also ordered to pay to the Mississippi Department of Audit the cost of auditing the books of the Clerk's Office for the term ended on Dec. 31, 1982, on which he served as clerk.

Orls was released from probation last December after paying $10,000 to the Department of Audit.

Tifton 78 AVAILABLE

The new hybrid bermudagrass, Tifton 78, is now available for Mississippians at several nurseries across the state.

Increased availability, the ability to establish the grass quickly and improved yields should make the new grass a popular forage among Hancock County growers.

Tifton 78 is a cross between Tifton 44 and Callie bermudagrass that roots quickly from the nodes of stem cuttings in the field or in a greenhouse propagation bed.

Compared with Callie, the hybrid bermudagrass produces more rhizomes and is immune to rust. Tifton 78 is also more winter-hardy than Callie and establishes faster than Tifton 44.

Tifton 78 produced 25 percent more dry matter than Coastal. It also produced 30 percent more green grazing.

Always store the bags in a refrigerator but keep them in a plastic bag away from other foods that might absorb the aroma. Keep juice frozen until ready to use. Store bottled juice in a dry, cool place and refrigerate when opened.

For information on obtaining Tifton 78, contact the County Extension Office.

Biologist predicts good oyster harvest

With a little bit of luck the Mississippi coast should enjoy an oyster harvest by October or November, according to Bill Demoran, oyster biologist with the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory of Ocean Springs.

Last year there was virtually no production from state reefs due to the massive oyster die-offs caused by a heavy influx of fresh water into Mississippi Sound.

The damage resulted from local flooding in the Pearl River drainage basin coupled with water coming from the Mississippi River through the Bonnet Carré Spillway above New Orleans.

Demoran believes the oysters are making both a rapid and a strong recovery on state oyster reefs.

"We keep rather close tabs on conditions on the reefs through our monthly collection and analysis of samples from the major reefs," he explained. "Our early use samples showed that all oyster growing areas are recovering normally."

Although neighboring states had some oyster production last fall and winter, Mississippi was hit hard by the loss of its best growing areas. There was virtually no production from state reefs and only a small amount of production from privately-owned oyster leases.

In years with poor prospects for production from state reefs, some oysters are transplanted from closed growing areas located in areas such as Biloxi Bay onto oyster bottoms leased by individuals from the state, Demoran noted.

After the filter-feeding oysters have remained in clean water about two weeks they have cleaned themselves and may be harvested for market.

Present conditions in Mississippi Sound are just about optimum for the continued growth and survival of the oysters, Demoran said.

Following the flooding last spring, oyster reefs received a heavy set of oyster spat in July. Of one of the major reefs sampled the first week of June 32 percent of the oysters measured were in the two to three inch category and about one percent were over three inches, the legal market size in Mississippi.

In working up the June samples Demoran and John Cirino observed evidence of spawning. Young spat were visible attached on shells collected. Optimum salinity for oysters in this region is in the range of 12 to 14 parts per thousand. Spawning does not begin to occur until the water temperature reaches 70° Fahrenheit. Spawning will continue for two to four months, then taper off, Demoran said.

How could there have been a spat set last July when the oysters had been killed by fresh water?

Demoran said it has been determined that recruitment of oyster larvae came from areas south of coastal Mississippi but as drastically affected by the spring floods. Louisiana officials monitoring oyster resources for losses found that only 27 percent of one reef, Cobagee reef, was lost. This reef is about four miles from the major reefs in the western Sound.

Oyster larvae stay in the water column for about 10 days before settling to the bottom and attaching to a hard surface, said Demoran.

Fortunately, the tidal flow is from Louisiana toward the Mississippi reefs in the western Sound, which may account for the spat set, he added.

Demoran and Cirino have noted the presence of some oyster drills—the most significant oyster predator—but not an alarming number of them.

Drills are permanent residents of the reefs and could become a problem if salinities rose above 20 parts per thousand. At times, the black drum fish is a problem predator, especially on inshore reefs such as the White House reef and the Long Beach reef.

As part of the laboratory's ongoing fisheries monitoring and assessment program, oyster monitoring and assessment provides valuable data and information on state oyster resources.

Five oyster reefs in open, approved waters across the coast are randomly sampled each month using a small oyster dredge. Each sample is analyzed to record the number of live oysters, dead oysters and spat set; the number of spat; seed; juvenile and marketable size oysters; and the number of spawable oysters.

Cultures are obtained to learn the incidence of fungus oyster disease, and the presence and abundance of oyster predators is reported.

The randomly-collected half bushel sample can be used to estimate the number of bushels of oysters per acre of reef. Salinity and temperature data over each reef are collected along with each sample.

As soon as possible the information compiled on the oysters is reported to the Bureau of Marine Resources of the State Department of Wildlife Conservation so that it can be used in making management decisions.

In addition to reporting on the conditions of the oysters themselves, the GCRL biologists also advise BMF where new shell cultch material is needed on the reefs and assist in staking out areas to be planted.

U.S. Army Corps of Engineers officials say it appears the Bonnet Carré Spillway will not have to be opened this year to protect New Orleans and environs from flooding. Therefore, work began the week of June 11 on staking out areas to be planted with additional cultch material just in time for the new spatfall, Demoran said.

Unless something drastic happens, he said, there should be some oyster production on state reefs in the coming season, but it is not likely to approach the record 366,000 sacks (each 2 1/2 bushels) harvested in the fall and winter of 1962-63.

Need for new jail becoming critical

If ever there was a need for a new Hancock County jail, it appears the time is now.

On Thursday, Ronald Peterson, Hancock County sheriff, appeared before the Board of Supervisors pleading for space to house prisoners.

One of the reasons Peterson was seeking space was because the jail population is above capacity, and next month another Grand Jury will probably issue more indictments.

Another prime example of a lack of space occurred on Friday when operation 'Wake-up' was conducted in which some 36 arrests were made, and that is more persons than the jail holds.

Sure the majority were bonded out, yet it is possible many of them will be indicted and convicted in the future, and where will they be housed?

A new jail was narrowly defeated last November, and the board of supervisors have indicated a proposal for a new jail will be included on the November ballot.

A new jail is necessary but it has to be approved by the electors, and even if given approval it will not solve the immediate problem.

It would still take 18-24 months to construct a new facility, and where is the overflow of prisoners going to be kept in the meantime?

The county jail now holds several prisoners destined for Parchman, but that state facility, just like our county jail, just doesn't have enough room.

There are many inmates being held in the Hancock County jail who would make it unsafe for our citizens if they were on the streets.

We wish we knew the answers, and are hoping those who have the power and authority will come up with some very soon.

Quotables by Cuevas

We had an opportunity to speak to Susan Irby, newly appointed press secretary to Congressman Trent Lott at the Mississippi Press Association meeting in Biloxi Thursday.

Irby, a former Sea Coast Echo employee, has served five years as Lott's legislative aide and an assistant to the congressman.

It was good to see Susan again, and we are happy she has a new position.

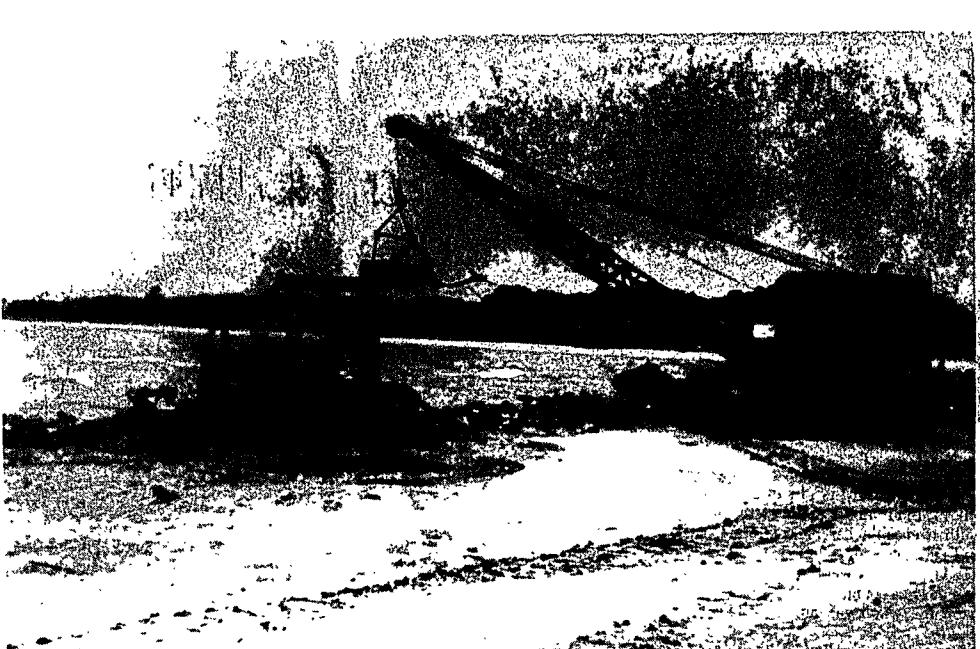

We know she is a very capable and hard working individual and wish her luck in her new post.

Someone has been setting the Hancock County Landfill on fire.

The landfill was on fire again this past week, and because of the very dry weather earlier in the week, the fire was almost impossible to extinguish.

As most of you know, it is illegal for the garbage to be burned under Bureau of Pollution Control regulations, and the problem is one which has had to be dealt with several times before in Hancock County.

We are hoping whomever is responsible will be caught and have to face the music from the Bureau of Pollution Control.

Safety commissioner

commends Legislature

The 1984 Legislature has been given high marks for its work on bills affecting law enforcement by James L. Roberts Jr., commissioner of public safety.

"The Legislature passed a number of laws that should enable officers to provide better services to the people of the state," Roberts said.

Highlighting the session were amendments to existing law that will require officers statewide to issue standard arrest tickets and summonses and to file a prescribed, standard report on all traffic accidents.

Another major legislative development is the establishment of a state medical examiner's office under the auspices of the state Crime Lab.

"The uniform arrest tickets and accident reports will make it much easier for citizens to deal with law enforcement agencies at all levels," Roberts said.

"Currently, citizens and their lawyers don't know what they might encounter from one jurisdiction to the next.

This confusion can lead to injustice and disrespect for the criminal justice system," the commissioner added.

The new law requires all state, county and municipal law officers to use a standard citation when they charge motorists with violations such as speeding and driving under the influence.

In the past, local jurisdictions were free to develop and issue their own individual citations, causing violators and judges to deal with several different kinds of documents.

The requirement to use a uniform arrest ticket is effective July 1.

Roberts said the new law requiring a statewide uniform accident report may offer motorists, insurance companies and lawyers more benefits than the uniform arrest ticket.

"Some accident reports filed in Mississippi are very detailed and contain valuable amounts of needed information, while some are sketch at best and require interested parties to develop information that would properly come from official sources," the commissioner said.

"Additionally, the use of a uniform accident report will simplify the training of all law officers in the state," he said.

Roberts described the Legislature's work on the medical examiner program as "potentially the most far-reaching, single action taken in years regarding the investigation of homicide."

The lawmakers voted to place the medical examiner's office under the authority of the Crime Lab and despite nagging problems with dwindling revenues, managed to appropriate a small initial budget for the program.

The budget will allow the Crime Lab to hire one forensic pathologist and a clerk. There will also be minimal funding for travel expenses, office supplies and equipment.

"It will be much more difficult for someone to get away with murder in Mississippi as a result of this new legislation," Roberts, a former prosecuting attorney, predicted.

The need for a statewide network of qualified forensic pathologists is great," he said. "There is a strong likelihood that deaths attributed in years past to suicide and natural causes have actually been murders."

Under this new operation, an individual from a sheriff's department or police department will eventually be assigned to obtain autopsy and a complete criminal history of making one to three trips to the Crime Lab.

"All of this will be done at no cost to the county," Roberts said.

people of the state this added protection," Roberts said.

All automobile drivers are affected by two other laws passed by the Legislature.

One new law requires motorists involved in traffic accidents in which someone is killed or injured or in which there is more than $250 in property damage to file a written report to the Department of Public Safety within 10 days.

The old law required the report to be filed within 5 days.

Also, residents of Mississippi who want a duplicate driver license must pay a $5 fee beginning July 1. The old state allowed licensees to obtain a duplicate for $1.

The major question left unanswered by the 1984 Legislature concerning the Highway Patrol is the critical need for additional funds to purchase automobiles for troopers in traffic enforcement division.

The steadily rising cost of new automobiles means that either budgets for car purchases must be increased or that the number of new cars purchased for state troopers each year must be reduced.

Since the Highway Patrol cannot function without enforcement cruisers, the only alternative is to operate the existing fleet for a longer period of time.

"Unless a solution is found to the problem of financing automobile purchases, we will soon have a dangerous situation in which troopers will be driving cars with 130 to 140 thousand miles on them," Robert said.

"This not only places the lives of troopers in danger, but vehicles with very high mileage on them are a danger to other motorists on the highway."

"Additionally, we are placing injured motorists in a life-threatening situation when they must rely on a prompt response in an emergency from a trooper who may be rushing to provide help in a delapidated, worn-out vehicle," the commissioner warned.

Estimating that an additional $1.4 million would be needed to adequately finance automobile purchases for traffic enforcement, the Highway Patrol recommended a source of funding.

The agency urged legislators to impose a $5 assessment in addition to fines levied on violators as a result of tickets issued by state troopers.

Some legislators argued that there were already too many assessments placed on traffic ticket cases but Roberts maintained that the additional fee was justified.

"This assessment would put the burden of purchasing Highway Patrol cars where it belongs on those people who are violating the laws," he said.

Currently, all Mississippians are forced to share the cost of buying automobiles for the troopers when only a small percentage of them are causing the problem.

Allowing violators who endanger the lives of the families of law-abiding drivers to pay a more substantial part of the cost of policing their behavior is fair," Roberts said.

The commissioners said increasing the budget for automobile purchases must be approved unless the cost of new cars begin falling dramatically.

Roberts said he was encouraged by the results of the recently concluded session.

He said the legislators found the new operation to be a good idea.

"All of this will be done at no cost to the county," Roberts said.

Responsibility of Freedom

It was said of the ancient Athenians that when the freedom they wanted most was freedom from responsibility, they lost their freedom, never to be free again.

A question worth asking is whether we are, like the Athenians, seeking freedom from responsibility, thus endangering our freedom?

Is it freedom from responsibility we seek when less than 20 percent of the voters cast ballots in an election?

Is it freedom from responsibility we seek when we refuse to participate in the election process?

Is it freedom from responsibility we seek when we ignore problems of state and local government?

Is it freedom from responsibility we seek when we are too often content to complain but not concerned enough to participate?

Freedom carries with it responsibility. Those of us who live in a free society have a responsibility to protect and to preserve that freedom through the acceptance of our responsibility as part of that society.

Hopefully, we will wake up before it's too late.

AARP state official urging Congressional action on health care costs

June 9, 1984
The Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Dear Editor:

America's political leaders apparently think that skyrocketing health care costs are an issue that's "too hot to handle" in this election year.

For the most part, Congress and the Reagan Administration are avoiding the issue. And not much has been heard from the candidates for the Democratic Party's Presidential nomination on the subject either.

AARP believes that the health care cost crisis is too important to be "swept under the rug" this year. Medicare is on the verge of bankruptcy.

Millions of American workers and their families are facing cutbacks in employee health benefits.

Child health programs are running out of funds.

That's why AARP is urging Americans of all ages to send copies of their medical bills to Congress during the month of June.

We want to give Congress the message that we need action on health care cost containment now and that health care costs are going to be a major issue in the fall political campaigns.

Let your representative and senators know that they need to consider this issue now. Send them copies of your medical bills and a note today!

Sincerely,
Maxine P. Payne
AARP Assistant
State Director

Pioneer women missionaries took Methodist message to India,

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the sixth in a series of articles by Katrina (Mrs. C.C. Sr.) McDonald of Bay St. Louis, member of the Main Street United Methodist Church here, on the founding and development of Methodism in America in conjunction with the national celebration of the Bicentennial of Methodism in America.

By KATRINA McDONALD

Our last article and this one are devoted particularly to the part women played in the growing and developing church, following the Civil War.

It seems appropriate to mention some of the courageous pioneer women who had a leading part in the early days of foreign and home missionary work in the northern and southern branches of the Methodist church and the Methodist Protestant Church and Evangelical United Brethren, which today constitute the United Methodist Church.

The women's work today is known as United Methodist Women.

Dr. William Butler and his wife Clementina Rowe Butler were the first missionaries of the Methodist Episcopal Church (northern branch).

They went to India in 1857, and from the first, Mrs. Butler was deeply concerned about the plight of Indian womanhood.

She worked and prayed for their health and education, and to gain support of the women back in America.

In 1869, she returned to Boston and was one of the eight women who organized the very first Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

At that time, the church would not send out single women but this group did. Miss Isabella Thoburn went as a teacher and Dr. Clara Swain accompanied her.

Miss Thoburn started a school for girls, which later became a college, highly respected and distinguished and named Isabella Thoburn College, in Lucknow.

Dr. Clara Swain began her work of healing and founded a hospital in Bareilly. The Clara Swain Hospital was the first place in India where suffering women could be brought for treatment in Christ's name.

In later years, when the trend was toward training nationals to take responsibility and assume leadership, daughters and granddaughters of these earlier women were taught by later missionaries and educated in other Christian schools.

Some, with special promise, were helped to come to the United States for further training and are graduates of Scarritt College and George Peabody College of Nashville, Tenn. and others.

Mrs. Julian Hayes of Baltimore who was the first president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of M.E. Church, South, organized in 1878, was very much interested in helping women and children in other lands.

Their first missionary was Miss Lochie Rankin who was sent to the Clifton School in Shanghai, China.

An early worker in the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the M.E. Church South was Miss Lucinda Helm, who was very disturbed over the salaries and living conditions of ministers in this country and their families.

They started building parsonages and schools for children. In 25 years they had built almost 3,000 parsonages, before this responsibility was turned over to the church. Later, they opened city missions called Wesley Houses.

In the Methodist Protestant Church, Miss Lizzie Guthrie helped to organize their Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in Pittsburgh in 1879 and served both in India and Japan, before ill health overcame her and she died in San Francisco.

Harriet Britton went on to Japan in her place and founded a girls' school in Yokohama which was later called Seibi Gakuen.

In the home field, Miss S.A. Lipscomb served as their first president, and early work was in Kansas and supporting a missionary pastor in Oklahoma Territory.

Their first woman missionary founded a school for mountain children in Pine Ridge, Ky. and a mission in Pittsburgh.

In the Evangelical United Brethren branch of the United Methodists, early workers or officers were Miss Minerva Strawman, Mrs. Elizabeth Krecher, Miss Lizzie Hoffman, Mrs. T.N. Sowers and Miss Emily Beeken. Their first missionaries went to Japan and Africa.

A few other names must be mentioned in thinking back over pioneer women who left a great impact on the areas in which they served.

Dr. Helen Kim comes to mind when one thinks of Korea. Born in 1899, educated at Ewha Woman's College and Ohio Wesleyan University she returned to her native land where she made a remarkable contribution to the religious, civic, educational and cultural life there and internationally. She finally consented to write a story of her life and it was published by the Upper Room Press under the title, 'Grace him during his tenure, U.S. Fidelity and Guaranty Co. and North River Insurance Co.

Otis' petition shows a total indebtedness of $93,411, including the $57,825 from the lawsuit: $15,000 in legal expenses, $4,000 in attorney fees, $16,545 owed to his mother, Mrs. Lamar Otis; $2,055 in medical bills to doctors.

Louisiana fugitive arrested in Hancock

A Louisiana man who turned himself in to Hancock County Sheriff's Department officials Tuesday has been arrested as a fugitive charged with aggravated rape of a 36-year-old woman in Louisiana.

According to Peterson, Garrett has waived extradition and is being held without bond in Hancock County Jail until officers arrive from Jefferson Parish, La. to return him to face charges.

Sheriff Ronald Peterson said Anthony C. Garrett, 18, turned himself in about an hour after officers went to the home Sufficient.

In the home mission field in the United States, black women had an active part from the beginning as they faced problems of many kinds.

John Wesley had baptized his first Negro convert in 1758 and Methodism was founded to be all-inclusive.

Very early in the 20th century, two dedicated black women from Georgia went to the mission field. Martha Drummer a graduate of Clark College in Atlanta and the Deaconess Training School in Boston, majored in Nursing and went to Angola, Portuguese West Africa for 16 years.

In the home field, Mary McLeod Bethune, a missionary minded black woman and educator, among her many accomplishments, founded the Bethune-Cookman College in Daytona Beach, Fla.

She, like Dr. Kim has been honored in recent years and when Rollins College of Winter Park, Fla. bestowed a doctor of humanities degree on her, it was the first time a college in the deep South honored a black.

The ones mentioned are only a few of the many courageous, hard working women who laid the ground work for all the work being carried on today by United Methodist Women. After several structural changes, they look forward to their second century with the same dedicated purpose.

Variety of salad greens available year round

By Ann O Rushing
Extension Marketing
Specialist

Whatever the weather, don't be surprised to see all sorts of salad fixings at your supermarket.

Lettuce and greens know no season. They're available year-round from Western growers. To compliment the greens there are onions, peppers, celery, radishes and tomatoes.

Bits of cauliflower, slivers of zucchini squash, just-cooked bundles of green or yellow beans, raw or partially cooked, also seek their share of the salad spotlight.

With the glorious array of fresh produce available in the stores during the spring and summer, vegetable salads and fruit salads are a joy to prepare as well as to eat. No matter what kind of salad, it's almost certain to use greens, whether as a basic ingredient or as a bed or garnish for other ingredients.

Head lettuce, of course, is the most popular of the salad greens. Most of this comes from California and Arizona. It's the perfect accompaniment for home-grown vegetables and fruits that will soon be available from produce counters, farmer's markets and home gardens in Mississippi.

Other salad greens lend a pleasing variety of texture, taste and color to salads. The brilliant green of escarole or the dark green of spinach leaves help make a salad more interesting. With watercress, a salad takes on a spicy taste.

Most people aren't familiar with the many salad greens available. The quickest way to become acquainted with them is to buy and try them. Once tasted, a buyer begins to think of various ways to use the greens to good advantage.

Select greens that look fresh with no wilted or discolored leaves and no wet or damaged areas or browned edges on the outer leaves.

The price of salad greens fluctuates greatly depending on supply and consumer demand. Be prepared to try different salad greens that may be less expensive than traditional head lettuce.

Take care of greens after they come home from the store. Remove fringed or inedible leaves and twist or cut out core, if any. Wash the greens gently under cold running water, then drain well. Place in moisture-vapor proof wrap or container and refrigerate.

Store greens in a different area from fruits such as melons, apples and pears. These fruits give off ethylene gas as they ripen and are one cause of the 'rusting' of greens.

Tomatoes are always a salad favorite. When buying tomatoes, look for those which are firm and not overripe. Test firmness by holding them gently in hand.

Choose plump, smooth tomatoes that have an even red color and are fairly well-shaped. Avoid bruised, puffy tomatoes. They are watery, usually break down when cut and have a poor flavor.

Tomatoes with small irregularities—such as well-healed growth cracks, roughness, or uneven shape—are only undesirable from the standpoint of appearance. If serving a tuna-stuffed tomato salad for a luncheon, a lopsided tomato is not wanted. However, that same lopsided tomato will taste and appear just fine cut up in a tossed salad.

Tomatoes are usually sold by the pound. When determining how much to buy, remember that one pound equals four servings, or about two large, three medium, or four small tomatoes.

When the tomatoes are home, store the ripe ones in the refrigerator and use quickly. Tomatoes with a greenish tinge will ripen if left at room temperature.

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

By Shawn Murphy

MINISTER, BAY ST. LOUIS CHURCH OF CHRIST

Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right. Honor your father and mother—which is the first commandment with a promise—That it may go well with you and that you may enjoy long life on the earth.

Fathers, do not exasperate your children, instead, bring them up in the training and instruction of the Lord.

—Ephesians 6:1-4, NIV

Over a month ago the moms were standin in the spotlight. Move over ladies, make way for the men, in fact, a very select group of men—fathers.

As if you didn't know, store windows, newspapers, magazines, and television advertisements have been cashing in on this special day by parading gift ideas before your eyes for the past month. Our families have been wondering whether to buy us yet another tie or to stuff us with a steak dinner.

I think it is appropriate at this time for us to spend a few moments in giving God thanks for our fathers, these men who have shaped our lives for eternity.

Think about the words of Charles Swindoll.

Think about your father, okay? Meditate on what that one individual has contributed to you. Think about his influence over you, his investment in you, his insights to you. Study his face—the lines that are now indelibly in your mind. Listen again to the echo of his voice—that infectious laugh, those unique expressions that emerge through the miracle of memory. Feel his hand around yours—his strong, secure arm across your shoulders. That grip that once communicated a strange mixture of gentleness and determination, compassion and masculinity.

Watch his walk. No other walk like his, is there? Those sure steps. That inimitable stride. Arms swinging and back arched just so. Best of all, remember his exemplary character. The word is integrity. As you read this, pause and recall just one or two choice moments in your past when he stood alone, when he stood by you in a time of storm. When he protected you from the bitter blast of life's harsh consequences. In a wake of such a legacy which time can never rob, give God thanks. That's all. Just thank the Giver of every good and perfect gift for the meaningful marks your dad has branded on the core of your character.

—(From 'Seasons of Life,' p. 219)

Now, you may still want to go out and buy him a tie or a card. But there is only one thing that any all-American red-blooded father wants for Father's Day. With all of his imperfections and weaknesses and needs. It is both plain and simple (and inexpensive too!). He needs to hear you say four words, "Dad, I love you."

As Swindoll said, "If you give him your love, you can keep all the other stuff!"

St. Rose de Lima Catholic Church

Parish News

By Rev. B. C. Keller, SVD
Today we approach in reverent contemplation and joyful praise our God who is Father, Son and Spirit. The divine nature is our model for Christian living.

We would like to thank our Gospel Choir for its beautiful performance at our Confirmation Mass last Sunday.

It was truly a memorable event for our young people who made their commitment to the church by the Sacrament of Confirmation.

Congratulations to Karen Acker, Brian Barabino, Jeff Collins, Bryan Dedeaux, Michell Dorsey, Richard Hawkins, Charlotte Joseph, Gilbert Labat, Thyrz Labat, Mariana Lewis, Don Lizana, Leslie Lizana, Sonja Price, Gigi Raboteau, Stacey Valentine, Charlene Williams and John Williams Jr.

Remember, this was not a graduation from religious education.

Also, thanks to Nellie Bell, Mary Clarke, Gerry Lang, Alvin Nichols and Thelma White who served the wonderful dinner.

Kindly remember in your prayers Marguerite Alexander who was buried from St. Rose yesterday.

Our Summer Bible School here at St. Rose will be this week, Monday through Friday, 9-11:30 a.m. We hope to have a very good attendance.

Mothers, won't you send your children? Some seminary novices and our own teachers are volunteering

We are still in need of at least one more Duchess candidate. Would you consider entering your grandchild, or niece, or daughter? You would be making a special contribution to the church.

Our Gospel Choir will practice on Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.; the Little People Choir, on Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

Next weekend Father Boucree will conduct another revival-style retreat at St. Augustine Retreat Center. Spend two nights and two days hearing the Word and experiencing the power of God.

Arrive at 7:30 p.m. on Friday and leave after the special liturgy beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday. Our Gospel Choir will be featured. Cost of entire retreat (meals included) is $40 ($15, if not overnight). Call 467-6414.
